CULTURE DOES NOT MAKE PEOPLE.
PEOPLE MAKE CULTURE.

IF IT IS TRUE THAT THE FULL
HUMANITY OF WOMEN
IS NOT OUR CULTURE,
THEN WE CAN AND MUST MAKE IT OUR CULTURE.

The Women's Studies Program at San Diego Mesa College is an interdisciplinary program designed to explore the past, present and future of women from a multi-cultural perspective. The courses in this program will explore how women's lives have been affected by society's values, traditions, and institutions and how language, belief systems, political structures and economic systems shape women's as well as men's status in society and culture. The Women's Studies curriculum examines how women's experiences differ by ethnicity, class, nationality, religion, and sexual orientation and investigates the literary, artistic, scientific and political contributions of women throughout history.

Women's Studies courses fulfill general education, American Institutions, and multi-cultural requirements for the Associate in Arts degree and for university transfer programs. Courses can also be used as preparation for a transfer major in Women's Studies.

Check out the excellent courses offered by Mesa's Women's Studies program when you are planning next semester's schedule!

Want to get involved?

Students can make a difference by joining the Women's Alliance Student Club (Contact Professor Gloria Kim gkim@sdccd.edu) or the Women in Science Club (contact Professor Jennifer Carmichael jcarmichael@sdccd.edu).

Faculty and Staff who would like to join the Women's Studies Advisory Committee should contact Denise Rogers (derogers@sdccd.edu).
