As a Mesa College graduate and transfer student, Agustin was part of the Puente program and points to that experience in being pivotal to his education and career. After earning a double bachelors from the University of Southern California in Cinema-Television and Chicano/Latino Studies, he began working as staff and then the coordinator for after school and summer community youth programs. His journey lead him to the position of Male Involvement Coordinator for the Upward Bound program in North Hollywood. This experience continued to ignite his passion to support students in realizing and reaching their educational and life goals. He returned to his USC alma matter and earned his Master of Education in Postsecondary Administration and Student Affairs. This propelled him forward to the positions of Program Director for Upward Bound in North Hollywood and then in Sun Valley, California. For four years he successfully led his teams in the planning and implementation of $1.5 million, multi-year grants that served first generational, at-risk high school students to attend and succeed in college.

Come connect with Agustin and hear about his journey.
